BRICKS ON THE BLACKWATER: ARCHAEOLOGY IN PUBLIC EDUCATION

Please join us on Tuesday, Nov. 10 at the Bowden Building, 120 Church Street, for the next PAS membership meeting.

Since 2008 FPAN interns have worked with students at Milton High School's archaeology classes to learn about archaeology. They have taught the students excavation techniques and methods as they excavate the remains of a brickmaking site in Santa Rosa County, the Scott Site. Jess Hendrix, FPAN intern, will tell us about the work at the site and the importance of educating the public about archaeology.

ARCHAEOLOGY AT THE NEW YMCA SITE - OLD PENSACOLA NEWS -JOURNAL PROPERTY

Construction of the new YMCA on the old Pensacola News Journal property has begun. Recently a team of UWF archaeologists were given permission to document the profile walls of the YMCA construction area and collect samples from features in the profile. Archaeologists identified remains of the northwest palisade wall of the 1767 British "Star Fort" and the moat around the 1778 British Fort of Pensacola. Future plans include monitoring construction on the rest of the former PNJ lot and hopefully identify other colonial structural features that were in the area including a bake oven from a 1765 map.

WORK CONTINUES ON EMANUEL POINT II SHIPWRECK

Since 2007 UWF's underwater archaeology teams have been working on the Emanuel Point II shipwreck site just east of the Pensacola Bay Bridge. Funded by a Special Category Grant of $203,368 from the Florida Division Of Historical Resources, students from the 2015 field school began the work and now it is continued into the fall and winter. We will get to see and hear the details about these excavations from Dr. Greg Cook at our bar-b-q in April. We will have updates about the progress and artifacts recovered between now and then. Stay tuned.....

STUDENT AWARDS PRESENTED AT OCTOBER MEETING

Each year PAS offers 4 awards for students for up to $400 each to help with expenses for research, travel to conferences or other activities associated with their thesis. UWF grad students Hillary Jolly and Nikki Mauro applied for and were granted the Fall 2015 Pensacola Archaeological Society Student Awards. They received their checks at the October PAS Membership Meeting.

Nikki will be traveling to the Society for Historical Archaeology yearly conference in Washington, DC in January 2016. She will use the grant to spend extra time at the National Archives researching her thesis topic. She is studying aircraft lost in the Gulf of Mexico and investigate site formation processes as the aircraft degrade underwater.

Hillary will travel to the Alabama Natural History Museum in Tuscaloosa and the Alabama Office of Archaeological Research in Moundville to examine the decorations on prehistoric ceramic vessels called Pensacola Incised in the collections there. She is interested in the iconography represented in the incised lines decorating these vessels and hopes to link these figures to those in our area at Big Lagoon and from the Bottle Creek site near Mobile in the Mobile-Tensaw River delta.
